On the Proteaceae of Jussieu; 212 p., 2 folded engraved pls, 1 folded table, 4to, new hcloth (marbled boards). Published in: Transactions of the Linnean Society.

Robert Brown is generally regarded as one of the most outstanding figures in the history of British botany. He read this monograph on the Proteaceae to the Linnean Society in 1809; but by 1810, when it was published, many of his species had been 'pirated' by Richard Salisbury in the text of Knight's work on that family. This great work embodies a revised classification of the whole family Proteaceae.

Adolf Engler (1844-1930) and Karl Prantl (1849-1893) were German botanists, famous for their system of plant classification, which is still used by many herbaria and authors of manuals and floras. Together they edited this monumental work, drawing on the expertise of many notable contributors. Although not recent it remains one of the greatest of all plant taxonomic treatises.

BF28085 L'HÉRITIER DE BRUTELLE, C.L., 1784. € 220,00

Stirpes novae, aut minus cognitae, quas descriptionibus et iconibus illustravit; Main title page of this important work, broadsheet or large imperial folio (45 x 59 cm). Uncut. With some slight foxing, but nothing serious. With a few repaired small tears in the margins. It has a Latin dedication signed De Brutelle and dated 1824 (24 year's after his death) by his second son. From the same work we also have for sale the title-pages of the first and second installments, and coloured plates by Redouté, Fossier and Freret.

This title page is taken from the very rare deluxe large paper and hand-coloured edition of this work, with plates coloured by Piere Redouté and his brother Henri-Joseph Redouté. In 1965 about 44 copies of the work were known of which 9 incomplete, and of 31 studied only 11 were large-sized.

In Stirpes novae Charles L'Héritier de Brutelle (1746-1800) described a great number of new species, many of which grew in his own garden, the gardens of his friends and in the Jardin du Roi. He had ample means and engaged the young Redouté to draw the majority of the plates (54 out of 91). The two developed a close friendship and L'Héritier taught Redouté the basics of plant taxonomy and dissection. The friendship proved a determining factor in Redouté's career and enabled him to fully develop his extraordinary talents. See: Günther Buchheim, 1965. BF28086 L'HÉRITIER DE BRUTELLE, C.L., 1784. € 120,00

Stirpes novae, aut minus cognitae, quas descriptionibus et iconibus illustravit; Title page of the first installment (Fasciculus 1) of this important work, broadsheet or large imperial folio (45 x 59 cm). Uncut. With some slight foxing. With a few repaired small tears in the margins. At the back there are traces of glue which are not not affecting the front (apparently it was laid on paper and then removed). From the same work we also have for sale the main title-page and that of the second installment, and coloured plates by Redouté, Fossier and Freret.

This (1st installment) title page is taken from the very rare deluxe large paper and hand-coloured edition of this work, with plates coloured by Piere Redouté and his brother Henri-Joseph Redouté. In 1965 about 44 copies of the work were known of which 9 incomplete, and of 31 studied only 11 were large-sized.

In Stirpes novae Charles L'Héritier de Brutelle (1746-1800) described a great number of new species, many of which grew in his own garden, the gardens of his friends and in the Jardin du Roi. He had ample means and engaged the young Redouté to draw the majority of the plates (54 out of 91). BF28073 REDOUTÉ, P.J. [IN C.L. L'HÉRITIER DE BRUTELLE], 1788. € 280,00

Zanthoriza apiifolia. Plate XXXVIII from: Stirpes novae, aut minus cognitae, quas descriptionibus et iconibus illustravit; Handcoloured engraved plate drawn by Redouté and engraved by François Hubert, broadsheet or large imperial folio (45 x 60 cm). Uncut. With marginal, unobtrusive small traces of watercolour, which makes me believe that this plate (and the other ten I have for sale) were used as examples for the colourists. At the back there are traces of glue which are not affecting the front (stuck to a support for the colourists?). We also have for sale the general title-page and the title-pages of the first and second installments, and plates by Fossier and Freret.

A beautiful plate after drawings by the young Pierre Joseph Redouté (1759-1840), then not yet 25 years old. This one is taken from the very rare deluxe large paper and hand-coloured edition of this work, with plates coloured by Piere Redouté and his brother Henri-Joseph Redouté. In 1965 about 44 copies of the work were known of which 9 incomplete, and of 31 studied only 11 were large-sized.

In Stirpes novae Charles L'Héritier de Brutelle (1746-1800) described a great number of new species, many of which grew in his own garden, the gardens of his friends and in the Jardin du Roi. He had ample means and engaged the young Redouté to draw the majority of the plates (54 out of 91). The two developed a close friendship and L'Héritier taught Redouté the basics of plant taxonomy and dissection. The friendship proved a determining factor in Redouté's career and enabled him to fully develop his extraordinary talents. See: Günther Buchheim, 1965. A bibliographical account of L'Héritier's 'Stirpes novae'.

With a repaired tear in the lower right corner and with a tape mark of former badly done repair with cellotape. We also have for sale the general title-page and the title-pages of the first and second installments, and plates by Fossier and Freret.

A beautiful plate after drawings by the young Pierre Joseph Redouté (1759-1840), then not yet 25 years old. This one is taken from the very rare deluxe large paper and hand-coloured edition of this work, with plates coloured by Piere Redouté and his brother Henri-Joseph Redouté. In 1965 about 44 copies of the work were known of which 9 incomplete, and of 31 studied only 11 were large-sized.

In Stirpes novae Charles L'Héritier de Brutelle (1746-1800) described a great number of new species, many of which grew in his own garden, the gardens of his friends and in the Jardin du Roi. He had ample means and engaged the young Redouté to draw the majority of the plates (54 out of 91). The two developed a close friendship and L'Héritier taught Redouté the basics of plant taxonomy and dissection. The friendship proved a determining factor in Redouté's career and enabled him to fully develop his extraordinary talents. See: Günther Buchheim, 1965. A bibliographical account of L'Héritier's 'Stirpes novae'.

Onderzoek aan het trama van steel en knol bij de Agaricales [Research on the trama of stem and tuber in the Agaricales]; 2 pages of handwritten text (captions), 44 plates of line-drawings (outline of mushroom and trama) on thick paper, with some notes in pencil, large 4to, in ringbinder. Only the plates, no text.

Leslie Arnorld Tjon Sie Fat (1951-1996), made these drawings for his Doctoral Report (probably not published as I found no trace of it). He was a botanist in Hortus Botanicus Leiden, and died young.

In mycology, the term trama is used in two ways. In the broad sense, it is the inner, fleshy portion of a mushroom's basidiocarp, or fruit body. It is distinct from the outer layer of tissue, known as the pileipellis or cuticle, and from the spore-bearing tissue layer known as the hymenium. In essence, the trama is the tissue that is commonly referred to as the "flesh" of mushrooms and similar fungi

The ambitious and expansive Intermountain Flora Project spanned three generations of botanists and the better part of a century. Conceived in the 1940s by Bassett Maguire, the project began in earnest in the 1960s, driven by Maguire's students Arthur Holmgren and Arthur Cronquist. By the time the first volume of Intermountain Flora was published, in 1972, Noel Holmgren (son of Arthur) and Patricia Kern Holmgren (Noel's new bride) had joined the project and committed themselves to seeing it through to completion. In August 2012, forty years after that first volume, the final volume of Intermountain Flora was published. Colleagues, friends, and admirers of Noel and Pat Holmgren marked the momentous occasion by contributing papers to this celebratory volume.

Kleine Aufsätze I. Collection of 11 papers; Collection of 11 papers bound in one contemporary half cloth binding (marbled boards and with "Pfeffer, Kleine Aufsätze I in gilt on spine").

Wilhelm Friedrich Philipp Pfeffer (1845-1920) was a German botanist and plant physiologist. Pfeffer was a pioneer of modern plant physiology. His scientific interests included the thermonastic and photonastic movements of flowers, the nyctinastic movements of leaves, protoplasmic physics and photosynthesis. In 1877, while researching plant metabolism, Pfeffer developed a semi-porous membrane to study the phenomena of osmosis. The eponymous "Pfeffer cell" is named for the osmometric device he constructed for determining the osmotic pressure of a solution.

Includes: Über periodische Bewegungen der Blätter / Die Wirkung der Spektralfarben auf die Kohlensäureazertzung un Pflanzen / Die Produktion organischer Substanz in der Pflanze / Ueber die Embryobildung höherer Kryptogamen / Die Oelkörper der Lebermoose / Hesperidin, ein Bestandtheil einiger Hesperideen, etc.
